To Whom It May Concern:

As Ed Sheldon's clinical supervisor (during his internship while a graduate student) and professional colleague, I have had ample opportunity to know him as a person and to observe his work as a psychologist.

Ed participates eagerly, and shows a great deal of dedication to the tasks before him. He is well read and is able to bring a great deal of knowledge to bear on particular clinical problems he works with. He cares deeply about helping people, is highly idealistic, and has a strong sense of professional and clinical responsibility.

Ed is unusually well able to conceptualize clinical problems and talk clearly to people about complex emotional issues. These qualities serve him well as a therapist and a family therapist. Ed will make a fine college teacher, introducing people to psychological theory and clinical work with a great deal of intelligence and humanity.

Sincerely,

Fred J. Goldstein, Ph.D.
